BATTLING NELSON

LOSES WORLD'S LIGHTWEIGHT TITLE TO WOLGAST.

Forty Rounds of Fierce Fighting Finds 11th the Game Dane Saved From Further Punishment by the Referee

Further Pusishment by the Referee—Nelson Weakens After 30 Reunds.

San Francisco, Feb. 22.—A new lightweight champion came in late this afternoon at the Richmond Point arena, but there was nothing spectacular about his victory and the sympathy of the big crowd was wholly with the defeated champion, Bat Nelson.

Ad Wolgast received the decision in the early part of the fortieth round from Referee Eddie Smith because Nelson was practically helpless and had suffered fearful punishment. Still the Dane was dead same and actually cut out the pace and forced the fighting up to the end of the thirlieth round. So game was he and so much did Wolgast fear his deadiy right punes, which has so often laid low men who thought they were near to victory, that the Milwaukee boy wouldn't take a chance.

For the last ten rounds of the fight he should have finished it in any and have knocked out his man, but he showed had no knockout blow. With Nelson tother would have finished it in any and have knocked out his man, but he showed had no knockout blow. With Nelson tother would have given him the prestige of knocking out the toughest man in the ring for twenty years.

A rentweed to take the lead and he seemed the graphic of delivering the blow on the jaw with the word of the state would be given to him and two that were even. winked at some of his friends as he went to his corner. They mixed and fought at a great clip, each landing on the face and isw. Woigast forced his man back, but Nelson was soon after Wolgast. The Milwaukee man put an uppercut to the Jaw and a moment later cut open Nelson's ear with a right swing. Nelson danced to his corner with the blood streaming his corner with the blood streaming on his ear.

Tenth Round—Nelson forced the pare.

Tolgast in a corner fought back flercely.

Tolgast peppered Nelson's face and sent he left to the Jaw. Nelson again danced

Eleventh Round—Wolgast outboxed Nelson, but could not make him break ground. Nelson waded in, unmindful of the constant lattoc against his face and jaw with short armed hooks and jolts. Wolgast swung right and left to the jaw. The round ended with Wolgast hammering at Nelson's jaw and face and landing at will. Nelson's law and face was a mass of blood as he took his chair.

Twelfth Round—Nelson forced the page.

Twelfth Round—Nelson forced the pace as usual, but Wolgast met him with several hard swings to the jaw. Wolgast seemed to have regained confidence, for he waded in with both hands. They roughed it against the ropes with Wolgast never letting up. When they broke Nelson was bleeding from the nose and mouth. A series of rights and lefts gave Wolgast the better of it.

Thirteenth Round—Wolgast had Nelson fighting wildly and spitting blood. Wolgast literally cut the Battier's face to riboons, but the Dane came in for more. Nelson wrestled his man against the ropes, but Wolgast covered up.

Fourteenth Round—Wolgast sent his right with great force to the face and followed with left and right to the body. Nelson almost forced Wolgast through the ropes and then assisted him to the centre Wolgast smiled and shook the champion's hand. He then sent a flerce left hook wire in succession for the jaw and followed the insuccession for the jaw and followed the insuccession for the jaw and followed in succession for the jaw and followed in succession for the jaw and followed the insuccession for the jaw and followed in succession for the jaw and followed in succession for the jaw and followed.

son almost forced Wolgast through the repes and then assisted him to the centre Wolgasz smited and shook the champion's hand. He then sent a flerce left hook swice in succession for the jaw and followed it with straight rights to the face. Fifteenth Round—Both showed more caution than in the previous round. Nelson wrestled his man about the ring, only to be rewarded with a hot uppercut on his sore mouth. Nelson slowed down and became the target for Wolgasz's well timed swings. Nelson missed a terrific swing and Wolgast became more careful.

Bixteenth Round—They roughed it, Nelsonirecelving the more punishment. Wolgast kept pegging away with rights and lefts for the jaw. Finally a hard drive caught Nelson on the jaw. Nelson closed in, exchanging punch for punch. Nelson swung right and left for the body and forced hismen against the ropes, landing several times with right and left at the bell.

Seventeenth Round—Nelson threw himself at Wolgast, who met these onslangths with right and left swings for the body. Wolgast swung hard rights and lefts to the law and then sent a half dozen right swings over Nelson's sore ear. Nelson received a hard left uppercut on the jaw, causing blood to flow afresh.

Eighteenth Round—Wolgast waded in butted the champion with his need and crowd hissed.

Nineteenth Round—Wolgast time and again jabbed his left to the face, with Nelson fighting back fiercely. They battled about the ring, Nelson all the time the aggressor and Wolgast slowly breaking ground, but playing for the face and jaw with short arm joits. Wolgast staggered the champion with a succession of powerful right and left jabe to the inw.

champion of the world, who makes his home at Milwaukee, was born at Cadillac, Mich., on February 8, 1888. He is one of the youngest world's champions and be-sides is the first fighter of German extraction to win the lightweight title.
Wolgast has only been fighting a short time. Four years ago he was just gaining notoriety by figuring in preliminaries. He has a long string of victories to his credit.

Wolgast's first battle was decided in 1906. He met a youngster named Young Nelson and by a singular coincidence knocked out his man in three rounds. He followed this up by defeating Kid Bond, Ed Smith, Johnny De Forrest, Kid Moore, Young Kilrain, Ted Smith and Kid Gannon. All these mills were short ones, rarely going over four rounds. Wolgast was rematched in getting the decision. This is the only reverse Wolgast has experienced The new champion had a succession of victories in 1907. Among his opponents were Jeff O'Connell. Biz Mackey and Oie were Jeff O'Connell, Biz Mackey and Gie Nelson, all rated as good men. Wolgast came prominently into the fistic limelight in 1908, expecially when he was matched to meet Owen Moran. The encounter was held at the National Athletic Club, this city, and was for ten rounds. Wolgast was heralded as a wonder, but he failed to live up to his Western reputation. He and Moran went ten rounds. Opinion was divided as to who won the mill. That same year Wolgast fought Abe Attell, Dan Goodman, Harry Baker and Frankie Neil. In 1909 he met among others Matty Baldwin in a twelve round draw and Tommy Murphy in a six round no decision bout at Pittsburg.

Wolgast's real boost came when he met Nelson at Los Angeles on July 13 last. The newspapers gave the fight to Wolgast and vesterday's return match was the result.
